Mountie faces sex charges

Man and woman arrested. Alleged assault of Sask. girl occurred in 1982

A senior RCMP officer has been charged with sexual offences involving a 12-year-old girl in Saskatchewan more than three decades ago.

Saskatchewan RCMP said Insp. Ronald Makar is charged with sexual intercourse with a female without her consent, and with having sexual intercourse with a female under the age of 14 in the alleged assault in Carlyle.

The charges are based on the 1982 Criminal Code and would be equivalent to sexual assault today.

"Allegations like these are disturbing when made against a member of the general public," Supt. Alfredo Bangloy said at a news conference in Regina on Tuesday.

"For a serving police officer to be facing charges like these is extremely disturbing."

Makar has been a Mountie for 34 years. He was arrested on Tuesday morning at the Wood Buffalo detachment in Fort McMurray, Alta., which he has commanded since 2012.

He has been suspended with pay.

Bangloy said a woman filed a statement last year alleging that she was assaulted in the summer of 1982 by a man and a woman "who were involved in a romantic relationship."

The woman, Constance Haduik, is charged with indecent assault of a female person.

She was arrested at her workplace in Kyle, Sask., last Thursday.

Bangloy would not say how the three were connected.

"I can't get into the specifics of the relationship, other than to say the 12-year-old victim was known to both accused," he said.

Makar was a constable at the RCMP detachment in Carlyle in 1982.

Most of Makar's service has been in Saskatchewan. He has worked in Kyle, Fond du Lac, Regina, Milestone and Saskatchewan RCMP division headquarters in Regina.

RCMP said if convicted, Makar would face an RCMP Code of Conduct review that could result in his dismissal.

"While in some cases where a member faces criminal charges the appropriate disciplinary sanction may be dismissal from the RCMP, it is dependent on the case and is not automatic," RCMP said in a release.

Métis groups audited over their finances

New documents show at least two provincial Métis groups — in B.C. and Saskatchewan — came under scrutiny after questions arose about their management and finances.

Both Métis groups insist they have since dealt with the issues raised in their audits.

The Saskatchewan audit raised questions about executive compensation and travel, while the B.C. audit found apparent conflicts of interest and expenses that should have been ineligible for federal funding under the terms of their contribution agreements with the government.

Arrest made after multiple stabbings

Multiple random stabbings at Cornwall Centre in Regina injured four people on Tuesday evening.

Regina city police arrested a male youth in the mall after he allegedly attacked people randomly with a knife and then threw the weapon at officers when confronted.

Three of the victims were taken to hospital by ambulance, while a fourth was treated at the scene. Their conditions were unknown. Police said they had found no link between the victims and the suspect, whose motive remained uncertain. No officers were injured. Unspecified charges against the suspect were pending at press time.

Saskatoon police have apprehended a 32-year-old man with a history of violence who escaped secure custody at the Saskatchewan Hospital in North Battleford on Sunday.

After an approximately five-hour standoff with the Saskatoon Police Service (SPS) at an apartment in the 2100 block of 7th Street East, Joseph Yaremko was taken into custody without incident.

Kelsie Fraser, media relations and social media specialist with city police, said Yaremko was arrested at roughly 4:40 p.m. Tuesday and police consider the operation a success.

"Our roles in these situations are to make sure that both officers and the public are safe and to bring a successful — and peaceful — resolution to them," Fraser told reporters on the scene.

Early in the standoff Fraser said Yaremko had made "numerous threats," and it was believed there were weapons involved. After he was taken into custody she said she didn't know if officers had recovered anything. "There was information that we believed there was a weapon involved, whether we have located one, I do not know," she said.

The incident started at around 11 a.m. after officers received a report a man had unlawfully barricaded himself in a residence in the building.

Police put in place traffic restrictions on 7th Street East between Preston Avenue and Grosvenor Avenue and both SPS crisis negotiators and emergency response teams were on scene throughout the standoff.

An RCMP release said officers were called to the Saskatchewan Hospital in North Battleford on Sunday after reports of an escaped prisoner.

The release said Yaremko, who is considered unstable and has a history of violence, escaped from the hospital's forensic unit and it's believed an accomplice picked him up outside the facility.

On Tuesday afternoon, a police press release said Yaremko was held in custody on charges of being unlawfully in a dwelling and on a warrant for being unlawfully at large.

The investigation is ongoing.

Minister in hot water for appointing family friend to appeal board

Social services. NDP critic charges that Crone's appointment raises red flags on impartiality of board

SARAH TAGUIAM

Social Services Minister June Draude appointed a close friend as co-chairwoman of the Social Services Appeal Board. SARAH TAGUIAM/METRO

Saskatchewan Social Services Minister June Draude is in political hot water again after appointing a close family friend to the arm's-length Social Services Appeal Board.

Rita Crone, a cousin of Draude's husband, has been co-chairwoman of the Social Services Appeal Board since Jan. 31. She was appointed to a regional appeal board in 2008, before gradually climbing the ranks onto the provincial board after Draude became social services minister.

NDP labour critic David Forbes charged that Crone's appointment raises red flags on the impartiality of the board, which re-examines social services cases.

"It was somebody I knew and had the qualifications ... but if this is the type of thing that's causing concern, I guess I'll ask to see if we should just make it nobody you know," said Draude, who has also made recent headlines for an overseas travel expense scandal.

Forbes, however, said Crone's qualifications don't matter if her position compromises fairness.

"It's about, 'Does it seem to be fair or appropriate?'" he added.

Prior to Crone's appointment, two government constituency assistants were named to the board — including Draude's assistant, Linda Griffith.

The government has since barred constituency assistants from being appointed as appeal board members.

Despite the controversy, though, Crone is continuing to serve as the board's co-chairwoman.

If the tables were turned, Draude said, she would not approve of an NDP social services minister appointing a friend to the appeal board.

"It's probably better if they weren't a really close friend of the minister," Draude said.

Jewelry heist. Suspect arrested

Muhidiin Ahmed Farah

Montreal police have arrested Muhidiin Ahmed Farah, one of four men wanted in a daylight robbery at a Birks Jewellers store in Saskatoon on Feb. 1.

Const. Danny Richer, spokesman with the Montreal Police Service, said Farah was arrested in the LaSalle borough on the evening of March 31 and was later handed over to Saskatoon police.

"Detectives here in Montreal were advised of the situation, so they had made some searches and once they had seen him, uniformed police officers had arrested him," Richer told Metro on Tuesday.

Farah was wanted on a Canada-wide warrant after four males entered Birks on the 100-block of 3rd Avenue South, brandishing crowbars.

They smashed display cases and stole a large quantity of Rolex watches and other jewelry before fleeing the scene.

Police say that about 90 minutes later, a vehicle fire was reported in the area of Bottomley Avenue and Osler Street. Investigators believe the incidents are connected.

Originally from Montreal, Farah, who was 28 at the time of the robbery, is charged with armed robbery, wearing a disguise to commit an offence, conspiracy to commit arson and breaching a court condition. METRO

Last December, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled unanimously that the country's prostitution laws are unconstitutional. The federal government was given a year to decide next steps. In the meantime, "red lights" across the country are operating in a grey zone, as sex workers, local governments and the public wait to see what will happen.

Sex ed: City-run class all about knowledge

For Day 2 of our three-part series, Metro Canada takes a look at how Edmonton has been actively regulating 42 massage parlours in its jurisdiction, with rules about their location, hours of operation and even requiring those who work there to complete a city-run class. We also find out what a massage therapist thinks about establishments that offer rubs, tugs and sometimes more

RYAN TUMILTY
Metro in Edmonton

Every two weeks, another 10 to 15 women join Edmonton's sex trade.

In a city-run information course, they take the last step towards being licensed to work in one of Edmonton's body rub parlours.

After a criminal record check is complete they take part in the three-hour class and become licensed to work in one of the parlours. Sarah Croll, a municipal enforcement officer, is part of the group that oversees these classes that she says give out fundamental information sex workers need.

"Knowledge is really important for those who have either never worked in the industry before or workers who just were never told," she said.

In addition to tutorials on bylaws and provincial employment standards, class attendees can also get tips on declaring income and taxes.

Kate Quinn, from Edmonton's Centre to End All Sexual Exploitation, says the class is a way of making sure the women entering the parlours know their rights.

"We are able to inform them about what they are getting into, so kind of eyes wide open, these are the realities and here are some facts," she said.

Quinn said women entering the sex trade often don't understand that they have rights.

"You have the right not to be sexually assaulted and this is what sexual assault looks like," she tells the women in the class. "You have rights if you become a victim of crime."

Croll regularly visits the city's licensed parlours to introduce herself to women in the industry, hopeful that this familiarity will make it easier for individuals to come to her and other enforcement officers for help later, if necessary.

"It's a really good chance for us to build a relationship before we actually venture out into the studios," she said.

Working to prevent exploitation

In 2009, Edmonton police laid the first human trafficking charges in the city's history after three women were discovered working under extreme conditions at a local body rub parlour.

Located on the north end of the city, Sachi Professional Massage and Spa was raided by police, who called the conditions of the victims "modern-day slavery."

Ranging in age from 21 to 41, the three women worked and slept in the same room in the parlour, which was open 24 hours a day, seven days a week. City regulations have since changed, limiting the hours of operation at body rub parlours to 7 a.m. to 11 p.m.

According to police, the women came to Canada legally from Beijing and Fiji after answering a newspaper ad for a job in the massage industry.

While three people were charged in connection to the case, ACT Alberta, an advocacy group that works with police and other local stakeholders to address human trafficking in the province, reported all charges were dropped because victims refused to testify.

LEAH GERMAIN/METRO IN EDMONTON

Under the law. 'It's just another licence'

Despite the recent Supreme Court of Canada decision, selling sex is still illegal in Canada. Yet in some of Edmonton's massage parlours, it's happening every day.

The city runs classes for body rub workers, regulates where businesses can be located and their hours of operation.

"The topic may generate people's strong opinions, but it's just another licence that we issue," said Garry Dziwenka, Edmonton's director of licensing.

He says the city's bylaws aim to keep workers safe above all else.

"The City of Edmonton has put in a progressive legislative model that focuses on the safety of the workers and the safety of the neighbourhoods."

The regulations call for criminal record checks and require at least two people to be working at each establishment at any given time. Parlours also must be at least 100 metres away from schools and daycare centres.

Municipal enforcement officer Sarah Croll, along with an Edmonton police officer, visit each licensed parlour at least once a month.

"We will go out to every single one of them and we will spend time checking the licences, making sure that everyone who is there is licensed to be there," she said.

"It's a very transient type of industry so we want to make sure that our list matches their list and we know where people are working should we need to get a hold of them," she said.

Legit massage therapists rubbed the wrong way

Separating legitimate from intimate. Illicit body rub biz puts sexual pressure on some masseuses with above-board practices

The massage therapists association of Alberta says having sex-fuelled parlours can create workplace dangers for legitimate masseuses. ISTOCK IMAGE

Legitimate massage therapists say they are tired of people assuming their work comes with the same "happy ending" that body rub parlours offer.

Chandra Kastern, the assistant executive director of the massage therapists association of Alberta, said her industry faces demands for sexual services that no other health professional faces.

"You don't go to a chiropractor and expect that or any number of other professions that involve an individual relationship," she said.

She said massage therapists get customers who expect sex to be part of legitimate massage. It creates concerns and safety risks.

"We work in isolation so a lot of times you have an individual practitioner either in a business or a home, working on their own," she said.

She said the industry also has to deal with the stigma created by the blurred line.

"When people hear 'massage parlour,' they immediately think of the less-than-above-board practice, and that stigma is what continues to drive members of the public who are looking for those adult entertainment services into our businesses."

During the 2011 federal election campaign, it was reported that then-NDP leader Jack Layton was found in a Toronto massage parlour during a police raid 15 years earlier. The worker in the parlour was a registered massage therapist, and the event prompted an open letter from massage therapists across the country.

"The insinuation that a massage therapist is anything but a health professional does nothing to validate or improve the image of the profession in the public psyche," read the letter.

Kastern said the best solution to this problem would be for massage therapists to be regulated in all provinces, as they currently are in New Brunswick, Newfoundland, Ontario and British Columbia. She said registration would allow them to better draw a line.

Kastern said that if massage therapists were regulated they would be able to stop people who aren't trained from calling themselves therapists and find other ways to create clearer lines between the two industries.

Senate scandal. Mounties say they're not charging PM's former chief of staff

RCMP officials say Nigel Wright, former chief of staff to Prime Minister Stephen Harper, won't face criminal charges in connection with the ongoing Senate expenses scandal.

Wright resigned as Harper's right-hand man after it was disclosed he wrote a personal cheque for $90,000 to Mike Duffy to allow the disgraced former senator to repay disallowed housing expenses.

Investigators now say the evidence gathered "does not support criminal charges" against Wright.

In a statement distributed Tuesday by lawyer Peter Mantas, Wright sounded a note of vindication.

"My intention was to secure the repayment of taxpayer funds. I believed that my actions were always in the public interest and lawful," Wright said. "The outcome of the RCMP's detailed and thorough investigation has now upheld my position."

The news also prompted a brief statement Tuesday from the Prime Minister's Office.

"We are pleased the RCMP has made progress in their work," it said.

"The Prime Minister's Office will continue offering every possible assistance to the RCMP's investigation."

'He's missed.' Over 1,000 people line up for a chance to say farewell to Flaherty

More than a thousand dignitaries and citizens lined up Tuesday to pay respects to Jim Flaherty, the former finance minister whose unexpected death last week shocked many across the country.

Mourners filed into a low-lit room, where Flaherty's casket lay between two Mounties in ceremonial dress, his widow and triplet sons on one side.

First to greet Christine Elliott as she stood near the Maple Leaf-covered casket of her late husband was Ontario Lt.-Gov. David Onley.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper arrived late afternoon for a private viewing, using a back entrance and not speaking to the media.

It took several hours for all of those who wanted to pay their respects — well over one thousand of them — to do so.

The visitation — which preceded a state funeral in Toronto on Wednesday — was held in Flaherty's Whitby riding.

Flags have been flying at half-mast on Parliament Hill since Flaherty's death, and Canadians have been signing an online book of condolences.

"He's missed," mourner Mario Cicci said simply.

Investigation launched

More than 60% of female inmates on mood-altering medication

Canada's prison watchdog has launched an investigation into the prescribing practices in federal prisons, after it was revealed that more than 60 per cent of female inmates across the country are receiving psychiatric medication.

A joint investigation by The Canadian Press and CBC has learned that in August 2013, of 591 female federal inmates in five correctional institutions, 370 were being prescribed at least one psychotropic medication — drugs that impact mood and behaviour.

When separated by region, the prescription rate jumps to almost 75 per cent in prisons such as the Nova Institution for Women in Nova Scotia, the Joliette Institution for Women in Quebec and the Fraser Valley Institution for Women in British Columbia.

'Worst mass murder in Calgary's history'

Celebration turns into tragedy. Cop's son charged as city reels from house party stabbing spree that left five people dead

The son of a senior Calgary police officer has been charged with five counts of first-degree murder in connection with the stabbing deaths of five young people, believed to have been celebrating the end of the University of Calgary's winter semester.

"This is the worst mass murder in Calgary's history," Calgary police Chief Rick Hanson told reporters on Tuesday.

The suspect, 22-year-old Matthew Douglas de Grood, is the son of a 33-year member of the Calgary Police Service, confirmed as Insp. Doug de Grood. Hanson told reporters he spoke with the suspect's father, who said he and his wife are heartbroken.

"They are now feeling so much sorrow.… Those young people are dead and they are absolutely devastated."

Police officers were first called to a house party about 1:20 a.m. Three people were found dead at the scene, while two more died in hospital.

Hanson said the victims included a 22-year-old man, a 23-year-old woman, two 23-year-old men and a 27-year-old man.

Calgary Mayor Naheed Nenshi was shocked by news of the slayings, saying, "This is not something that happens here."

Elsewhere, four people were injured in an apparently random stabbing at a shopping centre in Regina. Police say three people were taken to hospital and one was treated at the scene and released. Police say a male youth is in custody.

Mississippi. Storm wreaks havoc at RV trailer park

A storm barrelled through Mississippi Gulf Coast communities, damaging or destroying about a dozen RV trailers at one campground, downing trees and power lines and cutting electricity in some areas.

The storm blew through the Santa Maria RV Park in Gautier at around 8 p.m. Monday, knocking some trailers off their blocks and overturning or destroying others.

Despite the destruction, only two people were injured, neither seriously, according to the Mississippi Emergency Management Agency.

Park resident Harrold Robbins said he and his girlfriend Debbie Dales were getting ready for bed and he was at the front end of the camper they share when the wind hit.

"The front end flipped," he said after returning from a hospital where he was treated for bumps and bruises and Dales got stitches to her head.

"It launched me back into the back end. Then it flipped over on the other side and came back up in the air and landed on our car."

Women in U.S. Army break another barrier

Fort Bragg. First women take up field artillery jobs as cannon platoon leaders

Under a canopy of trees on the edge of a large field, soldiers from Bravo Battery are lying in a circle as they pore over targeting charts. Nearby, others are preparing the howitzer cannons as helicopters swoop overhead. At the edge of the circle, the platoon leader watches as the field artillerymen go through their training exercise.

No one seems to notice the small knot of hair at the base of the lieutenant's helmet, or that 1st Lt. Kelly Requa is the only woman on the field at Campbell's Crossroads on the sprawling grounds of Fort Bragg.

By January 2016, the U.S. military must open all combat jobs to women or explain why any must remain closed. The Army in November officially began assigning female officers to lead the cannon platoons and plans to open other jobs, including those of crew members within the field artillery units.

The integration comes as the military struggles with an increase in reports of sexual harassment and assault and as Congress battles with the Pentagon over how those cases are prosecuted.

Some of those concerns were reflected in how senior commanders are preparing the men as women arrive — and what the men say concerns them, from whether women can keep up to whether the men's salty language will be too offensive.

At the base near Fayetteville, Requa is one of at least eight female lieutenants who were brought into the 3rd Battalion of the 321st Field Artillery Regiment beginning late last year to lead the field artillery units. For now, she's the only woman in her platoon. Later this spring, women will begin serving as crew members — soldiers who actually position the 1,800-kilogram cannons, zero in on targets and fire the rounds.

Integration pains

- While men for the most part said they were unconcerned about the integration of women into their unit, commanders said some weren't too thrilled initially.
- Men worried about job standards being lowered to allow women to qualify and wondered about favouritism and whether the men would automatically help the women, who might be smaller. And they fretted about swearing in front of the women.
- For the women, the integration means more pressure and scrutiny.
- For the men, it means more training in sexual-assault awareness and prevention, and more lectures on respect, team building and moral character.

President vows to rebuild burned city

Chile wildfires. About 3,000 homes have been destroyed in Valparaiso, 15 people killed and hundreds more injured

Chile's President Michelle Bachelet vowed Tuesday to reconstruct the once-beautiful port city of Valparaiso according to a master plan that would prevent many of the 11,000 victims of devastating wildfires from rebuilding on hills that cannot be protected from disasters.

The fires that started Saturday and leaped from hilltop to densely populated hilltop have been contained but not extinguished. Every stiff wind threatens to lift the burning embers, putting still more neighbourhoods at risk.

"We think this is a tremendous tragedy, but … it is also a tremendous opportunity to do things right," Bachelet said in an interview with El Diario de Cooperativa.

"What we're looking at in terms of reconstruction, is how to rebuild in a more orderly manner, better and more worthy" of Valparaiso's status as a World Heritage City.

UNESCO granted the city that honour in large part because of its unique architecture, laid out on narrow, curving streets that climb hills so steep that many people commute by climbing stairways or riding cable cars. Brightly painted, improvised wooden houses hug forested hills and ravines, which form a natural amphitheatre around Chile's second-largest port.

While the city is often blanketed by fog from the Pacific Ocean, it has been plagued throughout history by wildfires that can spread quickly when the wind blows out to sea.

While some fire victims were middle-class families, thousands more lived in primitive conditions, sharing structures built on tiny ledges of land carved into the hills. Many of these homes were built illegally, lacking water and sewer connections, with improper foundations on dangerous slopes and no way for emergency vehicles to reach them in a crisis.

Rebuilding

With so many houses reduced to rubble and nearly 11.5 square kilometres of the compact city's forests turned to ash, Chileans were debating Tuesday about whether bulldozers might help solve longstanding problems.

- Thousands of fire victims have returned to their holds on the hills, even in places now covered with charred rubble on denuded slopes that could turn to landslides in the next rain.
- Urban planners called for safer structures, wider streets and better infrastructure.
- Cultural representatives expressed concerns that new construction could endanger the city's rich character.

Ukrainian military clashes with pro-Russian insurgents

Eastern uprising. First action since president's 'anti-terrorist operation' announced

In the first Ukrainian military action against a pro-Russian uprising in the east, government forces said they clashed Tuesday with about 30 armed gunmen at a small airport.

The clash came hours after Ukraine's acting president, Oleksandr Turchynov, had announced an "anti-terrorist operation" against the armed, pro-Russian insurgents who had seized control of numerous buildings in at least nine cities in Ukraine's restive east.

The central government has so far been unable to rein in the insurgents, who it says are being stirred up by paid operatives from Russia. The insurgents are demanding broader autonomy and closer ties with Russia.

The clashes Tuesday came at Kramatorsk airport, just south of the city of Slovyansk, which is 160 kilometres from the Russian border. The city has come under the increasing control of the gunmen who seized it last weekend.

The precise sequence of events in Kramatorsk was mired in confusion amid contradictory official claims. Ukraine's security services anti-terrorist unit chief, Gen. Vasyl Krutov, speaking outside Kramatorsk airport, said his men managed to thwart an attack by fighters in green military uniforms without insignia who tried to storm the facility in the late afternoon.

There were conflicting reports of casualties. Yury Zhadobin, co-ordinator of a pro-Russian defence force, said two people were slightly injured and were taken to a hospital. Russian media, without sourcing, claimed anywhere from four to 11 casualties at the airport. The Ukrainian government said there were no casualties. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Berlusconi sentenced to community service

A Milan court ruled Tuesday that Silvio Berlusconi will perform a year of community service for his tax fraud conviction at a centre for the elderly. ALESSANDRA TARANTINO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Former Italian prime minister Silvio Berlusconi was ordered Tuesday to spend four hours a week helping the elderly to repay society for his tax fraud conviction, a sentence that imposes few restrictions on his campaigning in the upcoming European elections.

The 77-year-old three-time former prime minister cannot run in the elections due to the conviction, but he remains influential in politics as head of the Forza Italia party. His support is also crucial for a constitutional reform to abolish the Senate sought by Prime Minister Matteo Renzi. The two men met on the eve of the court's decision in Renzi's offices, according to Italian media reports.

Berlusconi's four-year sentence for tax fraud was confirmed by Italy's highest court last summer, the first ever against the media mogul in dozens of prosecutions, and reduced to one year under a general amnesty aimed at easing overcrowding in Italian prisons. Due to Berlusconi's age and the relatively short sentence, prison time was never likely. He was, however, booted from the Senate and given a two-year ban on running for elected office.

Berlusconi is still on trial for political corruption in Naples and under investigation in Milan for witness tampering in trials relating to sex-fuelled parties at his villa near Milan. His appeals trial for a conviction for having paid for sex with a minor and using his influence to cover it up is scheduled to open in June. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Court's decision

The Milan court's decision stipulated that Berlusconi must spend most of his time in the Lombard region where he lives, but permits him to travel to Rome each week.

- It also allows him to come and go from his residences in Rome and Milan between 6 a.m. and 11 p.m., freeing him to partake in the campaign.

LGBT equality

India recognizes transgender rights

India's top court on Tuesday issued a landmark verdict recognizing transgender rights as human rights, saying people can identify themselves as a third gender on official documents.

The Supreme Court directed the federal and state governments to include transgender people in all welfare programs for the poor including education, health care and jobs to help them overcome social and economic challenges. Previously, transgender Indians could only identify themselves as male or female in all official documents.

There are an estimated three million transgender people in India. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Security Council views ghastly photos of victims

The UN Security Council fell silent Tuesday after ambassadors viewed a series of ghastly photographs of dead Syrian civil war victims, France's ambassador said.

The pictures showed people who were emaciated, with their bones protruding, and some bearing the marks of strangulation and repeated beatings, and eyes having been gouged out.

France, which hosted the presentation at the Security Council, said the photographs are evidence of war crimes by the government of Syrian President Bashar Assad. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Flight 370

Sub aborts first search mission

A robotic submarine hunting for the missing Malaysian jet aborted its first mission after only six hours, surfacing with no new clues when it exceeded its maximum depth along the floor of the Indian Ocean, officials said Tuesday.

Search crews sent the U.S. navy's Bluefin 21 into the depths Monday to begin scouring the seabed for the missing plane after failing for six days to detect any new signals believed to be coming from its black boxes.

The data collected by the sub was later analyzed and no sign of the missing plane was found, the U.S. navy said. Crews were hoping to send it back on another mission later Tuesday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hockey parents take to forums to criticize kids

Online forums. Ontario hockey forums are awash with nasty comments from parents criticizing young players

"How can a fat, out of shape dad have a kid who is a real athlete? Not likely."

Hockey parents in Ontario have taken to an online forum to bully young players with nasty comments such as the one above, and back-and-forth banter harshly criticizing their skill.

Network54.com is a free message board website filled with everything from basketball and hockey tryouts to video game forums, but several threads posted by Ottawa hockey parents have gotten downright nasty.

One post criticizes an elite-level teenaged female AA hockey player, arguing she doesn't belong on a certain Ottawa hockey team.

"But Daddy and Mommy have pumped her head up so much that she can barely get a helmet on," the anonymous post read. Another thread entitled "AA parents who think their kids is AAA" calls out another young player as getting a "free ride," on a AAA team.

"What you have is a loser kid who can't make a team on his own merit," one post read.

Others were so shocking they were not fit to print.

Ontario Hockey Federation (OHF) executive director Phillip McKee has been aware of the site for years, but because it's anonymous and based out of California, there is nothing his organization can do.

McKee said that the OHF has suspended parents and players in the past for making inappropriate remarks via Twitter or Facebook.

Hockey parent and coach Sam Seymour has three children who play hockey — one who plays AAA in the Outaouais. He said there are similar sites in Quebec and the nasty banter is just as ugly on those sites. He noted he would hate for parents to be talking about his children the way they have been about others.

"The interactions in the rinks are crazy enough that I don't know why we want something else to facilitate it," said Seymour.

Metro set up an account on the site and reached out to the parents, but nobody came forward.

The Ontario Minor Hockey Association is introducing a mandatory "Respect in Sport" for hockey parents in the province for the 2014-15 season and although Seymour said awareness is never a bad thing, he's not so sure it will change much.

"Taking a course doesn't change a person's innate behaviour, but hopefully it makes them more aware and I think people are becoming more aware of where the lines are," he said.

Impacting confidence

An Ottawa developmental psychology professor says a hockey forum for parents that targets young players could be the trigger that makes them leave the game.

Associate Professor Anne Bowker, at Carleton University, did a study on hockey parents five years ago, attending 70 games and noting what parents were saying. While most parents were positive with a "small minority" of aggressive parents shouting. She added that parents expressing negative comments can impact how kids feel about themselves and whether they continue to play. TREVOR GREENWAY/METRO IN OTTAWA

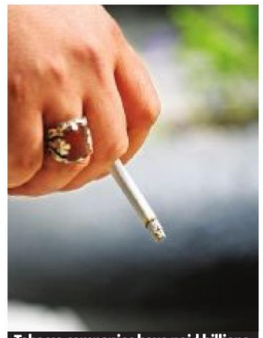
Tobacco companies pay billions to states under settlement

$6B US annually. Payments come amid criticism that U.S. states should be using more of the money for tobacco-prevention programs



Tobacco companies have paid billions in a settlement. JOHN MOORE/GETTY IMAGES

America's top cigarette makers said Tuesday they have made about $6 billion US in annual payments as part of a long-standing settlement in which some companies are paying states for smoking-related health-care costs.

Under the 1998 Master Settlement Agreement, participating tobacco companies agreed to make billions in payments to 46 states, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam, the U.S. commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands and the District of Columbia over more than two decades. States first received full payments under the settlement in 1999. It was estimated that the companies would pay up to $246 billion over 25 years. Future annual payments also will continue in perpetuity.

The billions in annual payments come amid criticism from public health officials that states are using only a small amount of the money to fund tobacco-prevention programs, making it harder to reduce death and disease caused by tobacco use. The settlement did not mandate that the money was to be used for anti-tobacco and stop-smoking programs.

While states on average have never spent as much the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention would like, the total has declined dramatically in recent years as states have grappled with budget deficits. Many also have raised tobacco taxes in order to increase revenue and supplement funds provided by the tobacco industry. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Guantanamo Bay. Judge to look into FBI investigation

A judge agreed Tuesday to look into how FBI questioning of a defence team member will affect the trial of five Guantanamo Bay prisoners in the Sept. 11 attack.

Army Col. James Pohl, presiding over the trial by military commission, rejected a prosecution argument to go forward with a scheduled hearing into the mental competency of one of the defendants or deal with other pending matters in the case.

Pohl agreed with defence that he must at least explore whether the revelation of an apparent FBI investigation could create a potential conflict of interest for defence counsel who may be a target of federal authorities.

The judge said he would reconvene court on Thursday to consider the next step in the case. He said he would order anyone working on the defence teams to inform the lead counsel for each defendant if they have been approached by investigators and said he would submit questions about the investigation to the FBI.

James Harrington, a lawyer for defendant Ramzi Binalshibh, said Monday that FBI agents questioned a member of his defence team about the release in January of an essay by the lead defendant in the case, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, to two media outlets.

Prosecutors acknowledged in court papers that they triggered the investigation by alerting the FBI that the essay, as well as two letters written by Mohammed, had not gone through a required security review.

South Africa. Cross-examination over in Pistorius murder trial

For five days, Oscar Pistorius endured a withering cross-examination at his murder trial from a prosecutor who pounced on apparent inconsistencies in his testimony.

Legal analysts said that witnesses who will testify for the defence could undermine the prosecution's efforts to prove Pistorius killed girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp on purpose.

Social media buzzed that Pistorius is in deep trouble — a South African talk show host wryly observed that the double-amputee runner had not "covered himself with glory" when his cross-examination ended Tuesday.

"Until the defence presents the rest of their case, you can't really evaluate the significance of any potential concessions that he may have made," said Kelly Phelps, a senior lecturer in the public law department at the University of Cape Town. The trial began March 3 and is expected to hear testimony until mid-May.

Airbnb. Whether it's legal or not, residents are renting out their homes, so now the City by the Bay aims to impose some rules

Legislation set to be unveiled in San Francisco would make it legal for city residents to rent out their homes on sites such as Airbnb, but only if they have liability insurance and meet other requirements, a newspaper reported.

Supervisor David Chiu was expected to unveil the legislation on Tuesday, according to the San Francisco Chronicle. Short-term rentals are currently banned in San Francisco.

On its website, Airbnb warns hosts to be aware of the laws in their city, noting that some restrict people's ability to host paying guests for short periods. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Officials in other parts of the U.S., including New York City, have raised concerns about short-term rentals as well.

- New York's attorney general has demanded that Airbnb turn over data about N.Y.C. residents who have listed on the site as part of an investigation into whether they are breaking a state law barring sublets for fewer than 30 days if occupants are not present.

HALLELUJAH STILL STRIKES A CHORD

JUST SAYIN'

Paul Sullivan

What is it about Hallelujah?

I'm not talking about Handel's Christmas chorus, but the wonderful (if mournful) Leonard Cohen song that has been covered more times than the national anthem.

There are more than 300 known covers, and now there's one more thanks to a surprise wedding version performed earlier this month by an Irish priest that has generated more than 26 million YouTube views.

The Pope would like those numbers. In his dreams.

Father Ray Kelly has a melodious voice and his performance, standing at the altar, is quite straightforward and lovely, mercifully free of devotional histrionics. At the end of it, he gets a standing ovation from the parishioners.

Ironically, the original is anything but holy, unless you mean Holy Cow!

Verse 2:

"Your faith was strong but you needed proof/You saw her bathing on the roof/Her beauty in the moonlight overthrew ya.

"She tied you to a kitchen chair/She broke your throne/And she cut your hair/And from your lips she drew the Hallelujah."

And that's just the part we can repeat in a family newspaper.

Obviously, Father Kelly's lyrics are more matrimonial, but his voice still captures the rapture of the magnificent chorus that the now-deceased singer Jeff Buckley first nailed in the first cover version all the way back in 1994. The original, recorded way back in Cohen's wry, dry monotone, inspired no one but connoisseurs of clever lyrics, but since Buckley's cover, it's gone on to sell more than a million digital copies, has been ranked number 259 on Rolling Stone's 500 Greatest Songs of All Time, and a British poll of 50 songwriters listed it among the top 10 tracks of all time. John Legend, no stranger to soulful music, calls the Buckley version "one of the most beautiful pieces of recorded music I've ever heard."

What is it about this song? Is it that "secret chord/That David played and it pleased the Lord?" Or is it the fact that Cohen rewrote the song 80 times, at times banging his head against the floor. It got to him, too.

It got to Bob Dylan, Neil Diamond and k.d. lang. It got to various American Idol, X Factor and The Voice contestants, and it got to the music producers of half the soundtracks of half the shows on TV.

It got to the Maccabeats of Yeshiva University. And it got to Father Ray Kelly at a wedding in Ireland.

In a way, it's the Hallelujah Chorus of our time: bitter, mournful, ironic, haunting … and redeeming.

The last verse sends chills down my spine:

"I did my best/It wasn't much/I couldn't feel so I tried to touch

"I've told the truth/I didn't come to fool ya

"And even though it all went wrong/I'll stand before the Lord of Song

"With nothing on my tongue but Hallelujah.

Hallelujah."

Skywatchers catch rare 'blood moon'

Sky-gazers in North and South America, Australia and New Zealand were treated to a full lunar eclipse — at least those fortunate enough to have clear skies.

The moon was eclipsed by the Earth's shadow early Tuesday, beginning around 1 a.m. EDT for 5 1/2 hours. The total phase of the eclipse lasted just 78 minutes.

For some, the moon appeared red-orange because of all the sunsets and sunrises shimmering from Earth, thus the name "blood moon."

Did you miss it? Next total eclipse is Oct. 8

- It's the first of four eclipses this year and the first of four total lunar eclipses this year and next. The latter is a rare lineup; the next so-called tetrad of total lunar eclipses won't occur until 2032-33. In the meantime, get ready for a solar eclipse in two weeks.

Jenga game is larger than life

metronews.ca

I once had the dimly recalled experience of playing a drinking game version of Jenga where each block assigned you a stupid human trick to perform. Eventually, the novelty wore off and it gradually devolved into a game of classic Jenga, only louder. Years later, the realization strikes about how that game could have been improved. Heavy machinery! Not combined with the alcohol of course, but as this Caterpillar stunt proves, serious training can make even Earth-shaking technology a party game championship contender.

SCENE 2

Coming back to haha-haunt you

Killing 'em with laughter. Hollywood hasn't always cared for a shot of humour with its horror

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

If the Paranormal Activity movies curdle your blood and The Conjuring kept you up at night, perhaps A Haunted House 2 will be more your style. A humorous hybrid of horror hits, it stars Marlon Wayans and Jaime Pressly in a sequel to the popular (but critically lambasted) 2013 comedy.

According to IMDB, in the new film Wayans has "exorcised the demons of his ex" and is trying to start his life anew with his girlfriend. Unfortunately his new house turns out to be haunted and, even worse, his back-from-the-dead ex has moved in across the street.

It's all played for laughs — and will likely not give audiences nightmares — but it would be interesting to know how the makers of movies like Sinister, The Possession, and Insidious feel about having their movies made fun of.

Some filmmakers are flattered.

Night of the Living Dead icon George A. Romero enjoyed the zombie takeoff Shaun of the Dead so much he asked star Simon Pegg and director Edgar Wright to appear in Land of the Dead. The duo can be seen chained up in a 12-second cameo under a sign that reads Take Your Picture with a Zombie during the film's carnival sequence.

But not everyone gets the joke.

Cedric the Entertainer, left, and Marlon Wayans in A Haunted House 2. CONTRIBUTED

Years ago Boris Karloff made it known he wasn't very happy about a horror comedy. He was approached to play the monster in Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein, but declined because he felt the duo's brand of slapstick would be an insult to horror movies. Nonetheless he did some promo for the film — there are publicity pictures of him buying tickets at the box office — and later appeared in Abbott and Costello Meet the Killer, Boris Karloff and Abbott and Costello Meet Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

Another horror legend said yes to Meet Frankenstein but no to the comedy. The movie was the only other time Bela Lugosi played Dracula on the big screen and he played it straight.

"There is no burlesque for me," he said. "All I have to do is frighten the boys, a perfectly appropriate activity. My trademark will be unblemished."

Finally, the movie Young Frankenstein gave overdue credit to an old-time movie studio technician. When Mel Brooks was prepping the film he discovered that Ken Strickfaden, the designer of the "mad scientist" electrical machinery in the Universal Frankenstein films, had all the equipment from the original movies stored in his garage. Strickfaden agreed to rent Mel the props and received a screen credit, which he hadn't been given on the original films.

That's scary stuff, kids

Garfield feels the great responsibility of filling out those tighty-Spideys

Andrew Garfield's Amazing Spider-Man costume is so skintight, he feels nearly naked — which is fine by him. "I love being naked," he tells Metro U.K. "It's important to be naked and be in touch with our bodies and not have shame about what we're made of. I love being in touch with nature and my own nature." Then there's the issue of how much the form-fitting Spidey suit reveals in certain delicate areas, something Garfield admits was given a lot of thought. "It takes a lot of consideration because you don't want it to be underwhelming," he joked during a TV interview in Australia recently. "You don't want it to intimidate, and you don't want it to (do) the opposite of intimidate. So yes, there is thought. But ultimately you have to trust that what you have is enough."

Upton pays clip-on service to her boobs

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News

Kate Upton has such an amazing body that people keep putting it on icebergs and sending it to space. Doesn't matter where you put it: She looks amazing in a bikini, parka or while weightless or, I assume, in a volcano, which is probably next. But Kate Upton herself is tired of her breasts. Probably because she has to follow them onto icebergs and into space.

"I wish I had smaller boobs every day of my life as I love to wear spaghetti tops braless or go for the smallest bikini designs," Upton told the U.K. Sun (via Page Six).

"Every single day, I'm like, 'Oh, man, it would be so much easier,' especially if people didn't constantly bring them up."

Not that Upton hates her 34Ds all the time. She just wishes they were optional. "If I could just take them off like they were clip-ons," she says.

Aaron Carter

Clearing the Aaron missing Nick's nuptials

Aaron Carter was a no-show at big brother Nick Carter's wedding in Santa Barbara last weekend, but it wasn't for lack of trying. "Aaron had a contract to appear at the Cherry Blossom Festival in D.C. before Nick set his wedding date. Even though he was obligated to fulfill his contract, Aaron still wanted to make the wedding," his rep tells E! News. "There was a team of six people who worked to put together a plan to get him to Santa Barbara by the reception so he could at least participate in the celebration. He was on his way when his US Airways plane experienced mechanical difficulties in Pittsburgh and they became grounded there. So he never made it. Aaron was legitimately busting his ass to make it to his brother's wedding. He felt awful and had every intention of being there."

Touring the bottom of the boot

Southern Italy.
All you need is a little wanderlust and wine to enjoy this beauty

AMBER SHORTT
amber.shortt@metronews.ca

If you can stomach the winding roads, the Amalfi Coast pays out in breathtaking views. PHOTOS: AMBER SHORTT/METRO

Southern Italy may be known as the birthplace of pizza, but a tour down the boot offers a culinary, historical and esthetic experience that goes far beyond a bit of crust and marinara. For travellers hungry for an excursion away from the travel guide must-dos, the Amalfi Coast and Apulia regions are perfect for the Italian enthusiast.

The Amalfi Coast

Those who can stomach the winding narrow roads and steep cliffs of the Amalfi Coast will be treated to beautiful, unspoiled views of the Mediterranean. Lush in greenery, the region is spotted with vertically built farms, quaint towns and pebble beaches. There is even an island or two off the azure horizon.

Eat and stay: Plenty of hotels dot the coastline, including the Hotel Delfino, which looks onto the island of Capri. Stop in the town of Amalfi for lunch on the beach at the Marina Grande restaurant.

What to do: Take in a concert at the Villa Rufolo in Ravello. The area inspired Wagner's final opera Parsifal and the stage looks over the coast; join a tour group for lunch at La Sorgente Farmhouse (they don't do private bookings) and see how a real Italian mamma makes mozzarella.

The labyrinth of Matera

It may seem like you are lost in the middle of nowhere, but historic Matera's maze of walls and corridors is worth the trek off the tourist routes, especially for an '80s kid who dreamed of chasing David Bowie's Goblin King from the film Labyrinth. From the paleolithic era right up to the 1960s, locals inhabited the Sassi di Matera (meaning "stones of Matera") — ancient cave dwellings along a canyon below the city. Some of the caves have been turned into museums, while others now house luxury hotels and restaurants.

Eat and stay: Take advantage of the city's history and stay at the Sant'Angelo Luxury Resort, which overlooks the canyon and caves. Matera is full of hidden cafés and restaurants — many in caves — so you can literally find your own hole in the wall.

Time travel in Otranto

It may be located at the heel of Italy's geographic boot, but don't hold that against Otranto. The city's castle, surrounding wall and cathedral are made of sandstone, pockmarked by age and weather. Brush your hand against the stone and tiny bits will brush away. The town has changed hands many times throughout history, and its cathedral houses the bones of more than 800 martyrs who were beheaded for not denouncing Christianity during Ottoman rule in the 1400s.

Indulge in Lecce

While the town has a distinct laid-back style — men in blazers and caps ride by on bicycles and well-dressed women walk the city cobbles in flats — Lecce is a feast for the stomach rather than the eyes. The Apulia region is known for its fish and fave e cicorie selvatiche (a tasty fava bean and chicory soup) found on most menus. The real treat is a regional dessert called pasticciotto: a crunchy-sweet pastry filled with creamy lemon custard.

Where to eat: Try a pasticciotto at the Pasticceria Luca Capilungo, which faces the ancient ampitheatre. For dinner, fill up on appetizers at the Osteria Degli Spiriti.

San Juan, Puerto Rico

Beautiful beaches, great food, rich history, secluded places to escape to, an actual café society and amazing scuba diving — what's not to love about Puerto Rico? This U.S. territory enjoys a steady rise in popularity, as people cotton on to the fact that the capital of San Juan is an excellent spot to anchor a week away. And while there are some really great hotels, including La Concha Resort on Condado Beach and La Terraza in Old San Juan, renting a condo is also an excellent option. Make the fresh seafood mofongo your order of the day. Now is a good time to visit, before it gets too hot.

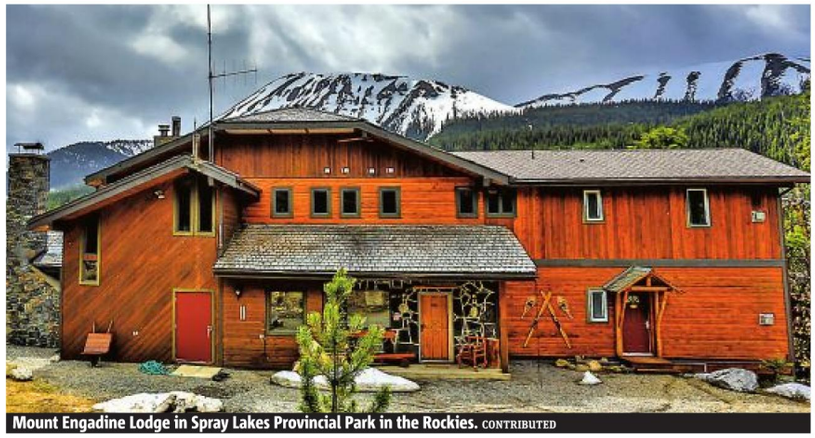
ON THE MOVE
Loren Christie
life@metronews.ca

In recognition of the upcoming Earth Day (April 22), I salute four hotels across the country that are doing their part for the environment.



Mount Engadine Lodge in Spray Lakes Provincial Park in the Rockies. CONTRIBUTED

Element Vaughan Southwest

Built green from the ground up, Element Vaughan Southwest is a 152-room extended stay hotel just outside Toronto.

Powered by 100 per cent renewable energy, the hotel has taken every opportunity to minimize its footprint. All guest rooms are equipped with recycling bins, flooring made from recycled tires and soy-based fabrics. The bathroom faucets are low-flow and the en suite kitchens feature filtered water and energy efficient appliances. The fitness centre has a stationary bike charging station, which powers up personal electronic devices while guests exercise. A complimentary Bikes-to-Borrow program encourages travellers to get out and enjoy the fresh air.

Auberge Le Baluchon

Located in Quebec's Mauricie region, the 88-room Auberge Le Baluchon is a standout for seamlessly incorporating itself into a stunning natural setting. The executive chef takes pride in the fact that the food is locally sourced. In winter, outdoor enthusiasts can go dog sledding, Nordic skiing or skate on the Du Loup River, a five-kilometre long outdoor skating rink. In summer, options include canoeing, horseback riding or mountain biking. Every activity requires nothing more than your own steam, or perhaps a little horsepower.

Mount Engadine Lodge

You can't get much more off the energy grid than Alberta's Mount Engadine Lodge. Nestled in Spray Lakes Provincial Park in the Rocky Mountains, guests will notice right away the lack of in-room televisions and refrigerators. Behind the scenes, the lodge limits its power usage by using a generator and rechargeable batteries to power energy efficient light bulbs and appliances. A state-of-the-art waste treatment system uses oxygen to break matter down and UV lights to purify it. The bathrooms are stocked with locally made environmentally friendly soaps and all the cleaning is done using environmentally friendly products.

Oak Bay Beach House

The historic Oak Bay Beach Hotel in Victoria, B.C., receives a nod for its recent renovations. Two years ago it was completely rebuilt on the same oceanfront site where the previous hotel stood for more than 80 years, and 95 per cent of the building was saved for re-use or recycled with only five per cent going to the local landfill. The hotel was recognized by LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) as a high-performance building and awarded with a Gold level environmental sensitivity designation.

Think outside the dinner box

Mini Vegetable, Ham and Egg Puffs. Borrow from the breakfast table to make a quick and easy dinner

DINNER EXPRESS
Emily Richards
food@metronews.ca

Sometimes breakfast can be considered a comfort food and we all need a little comfort after a long days work.

That's why breakfast for dinner is a popular way to eat fast and healthy.

Keeping a pantry of staples is helpful and always having those protein-filled eggs in your refrigerator makes for endless possibilities. For example, with only a few ingredients, you can enjoy delicious vegetables among eggs that are baked. All it takes to round out your meal is salad and crusty bread. These little puffs are perfect to enjoy on the run as well.

Any leftovers can be packed into lunches the next day or enjoyed on your way out the door to work.

Ingredients

- 1 tsp (5 ml) canola oil
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) diced onion
- Half a red bell pepper, diced
- 1 cup (250 ml) chopped broccoli
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) chopped ham
- 1/2 tsp (2 ml) dried thyme
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) black pepper
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) crumbled feta cheese
- 4 eggs
- 2 egg whites
- 1 cup (250 ml) skim milk
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) wheat bran
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) whole wheat flour

1. In skillet, heat oil over medium heat and cook onion and pepper for 2 minutes or until softened. Add broccoli, ham, thyme and pepper; cover and steam for 3 mins or until tender crisp and bright green. Divide mix among 12 greased muffin tins. Sprinkle cheese over top of vegetable mixture.

2. In bowl, whisk together, eggs, egg whites, milk, bran and whole wheat flour. Pour evenly over vegetable and cheese mixture. Bake in 400 F (200 C) oven for about 20 minutes or until golden, set and puffed. Let cool slightly before serving.

Cooking tips

- Using muffin tins to make these helps create a perfect size for everyone big and small in the family. Easy enough to take on the run when time is crunched or for those late-night dinners.
- These can be made up to 2 days ahead and kept refrigerated to be reheated quickly in the microwave.
- Try using shredded cheddar cheese instead of feta.

This recipe makes 12 puffs. EMILY RICHARDS

Monday to Friday without a frown

Because I'm happy! Would you jump the career ship you're currently on to be part of a business that leaves you beaming?

SIDNEYEVE MATRIX
TalentEgg.ca

One of the main reasons people switch jobs is a disconnect between their personal goals and the company values.

A professional position misfit leaves you feeling unappreciated and undervalued, every day.

This isn't just about being in a mild state of discomfort.

Research shows being unhappy at work results in more stress, causes a hit to your self-esteem, and interferes with your professional competence.

According to a new report on job satisfaction, millennials (think 20- and 30-somethings) are particularly concerned with having a job that authentically fits who they are. But many people don't find that perfect job right away.

Researchers at CreativeLive discovered that a third of currently employed Gen Y workers wish they could jump the corporate ship to find a workplace where they could be surrounded with more creative people. Another third would happily take a salary cut if they could find a job with the opportunities to do meaningful work that has a positive social impact.

At the younger end of the Gen Y cohort, a 2014 survey of 15,000 undergraduate students and new grads showed that finding one's place in a company with the right "people and culture fit" is the number one consideration for millennial job seekers. So how to get the right custom career fit? A combination strategy of conversations and creativity is the answer.

Conversations: Talk to friends

Mining your personal networks is a smart way to land employment that fits.

Even loose ties on LinkedIn or Twitter are important when you're seeking introductions, references, and insider information about job openings. But your closest friends are uniquely important. If your friends (and their friends) have a job they love, that's your first step on the trail toward a job you'll enjoy.

You like your friends for a reason — you probably share similar world views and care about the same things. Beyond happiness, working with friends may result in a productivity boost. Researchers at the London School of Economics found that employees worked harder and got 10 per cent more accomplished in jobs where they worked with friends, especially if those pals were industrious types.

Because we all like a challenge, ask your friends if there are opportunities for continued learning, skills training, and leadership development at their workplaces. CONTRIBUTED

Creativity: Blog your career

"I think having a blog is a great way of showing employers what you can do before you even get to the interview stage," said Rachel Davies, a new graphic design grad from Nottingham Trent University in the U.K. "I definitely think my blog helped me get my internship."

Indeed, "you have to be willing to show who you are," advises Shara Senderoff, founder of InternSushi. Having a blog focused on your industry (trends, news, debates, case studies) communicates volumes to a recruiter about your professional ambitions, creative thinking and skills.

Plus, "it shows them you're more likely to understand their company's values," advises Lynn Finn, an HR pro from the University of Northampton.

In an era of social screening, recruiters will always Google you, and having a great blog can work to "stack the deck in your favour," advises Liz Lynch, author of Smart Networking. "If you're competing with someone who has equal skills and experience," Lynch says, "a blog can be the tie-breaker."

Two golds, one cup not enough for the Kid

Good at everything.
Crosby leads Penguins into playoffs with a division title

Sidney Crosby won his first Stanley Cup at age 21 and his first of two Olympic gold medals at 22. This season, he led the Pittsburgh Penguins to a division title, won the scoring race and is favoured to be the NHL's most valuable player.

Yet that's not enough.

"He's really got this essence about him ... that makes him constantly feel like where he is, is one step behind where he's going and where he needs to be," trainer Andy O'Brien said. "I think it's just a real unique quality that makes him Sidney Crosby."

Crosby earned his second Olympic gold in Sochi, but he's almost five full years removed from the only cup he has ever won. He insists these playoffs don't feel any different that previous years, only now he has experienced more spring disappointments since 2009.

"Just because you want to do it doesn't mean it's going to happen," Crosby said of winning the Stanley Cup. "I think that makes you appreciate it, but at the same time, it motivates you to know that as much as you can kind of put forward to give yourself that chance, give your team that chance, you've got to do that."

Crosby tends to be at his best when his team needs it, something evidenced by his 104-point season while the Penguins dealt with injuries to Evgeni Malkin, Pascal Dupuis and James Neal, among others.

The 26-year-old Cole Harbour, N.S., native had a direct part in a league-leading 43 per cent of Pittsburgh's goals on the way to first place in the new Metropolitan Division. Crosby doesn't know if this has been his best season — he won the Hart Trophy in 2006-07 with 120 points — but he is proud of staying healthy and being consistent.

Teammates can't help but be impressed.

That on-ice production is not just a result of Crosby's natural talent, said O'Brien.

"He approaches his game year-after-year, night-after-night as if, 'There's something I can be better at, I've got to find a way to do this more,'" O'Brien said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Impressed

"His expectations are so high, but he's been able to be so consistent and he's been able to play (almost) every game."

What will replace Crown Vic?

Sea change. Latest batch of cop cars has big treads to fill

TODD D. BURLAGE
wheelbasemedia.com

It's a lowly full-sized sedan, but everyone knows its shape and what it stands for — especially when it finds your rearview mirror — the Ford Crown Victoria cop car.

But all great runs must come to an end, and when the last of the more than 10 million Crown Victorias rolled off the assembly line in September of 2011, the end of one automotive era ushered in the beginning of another.

"The cop car market follows the way the consumer market goes," said Wayne Cunningham, senior editor of CNET Car Tech. "There has just sort of been a sea of change going on in the police vehicle platforms, and the Crown Victoria couldn't hold its place in the market any longer."

The Crown Victoria's fall from grace after 15 years of dominance in the police-force market came as a result of sagging sales, rising fabrication costs and an increased push for more fuel-efficient vehicles. Ford reports that demand levels for the Crown Victoria slipped by 60 per cent in its last decade of production, and the vehicle was available only in fleet sales since the 2008 model year through its discontinuation in 2011.

"The technology was catching up to the Crown Vic also," said Lt. Jim Flegel, a Michigan State Police officer with the MSP Precision Driving Unit.

"Ford had to keep those vehicles up to date in terms of federal standards, and stuff all that money into the vehicle to keep meeting those standards. It just wasn't feasible anymore, so (Ford) decided to go with a different platform that was going to meet all the federal safety standards."

The end of the Crown Vic era (1955-'56, 1979-'80 and 1983-2011) opened the market for a vehicle void in North American police departments, though some agencies aren't quite ready to dissolve the relationship.

Before production ceased, the Austin Police Department in Texas stockpiled 176 Crown Victoria patrol cars to help serve and protect the city for years to come.

Just how big an impression has the Crown Victoria made? Austin Police Department in Texas stockpiled 176 of them before production ceased in 2011.

The Dodge Charger

Can the Ford Taurus and Explorer police vehicles fill the tracks of the much-loved Crown Victoria?

Even with the end of the line for the Crown Vic, Ford didn't quietly concede its place as the top manufacturer of police vehicles in North America, unveiling for the 2012 model year its next-gen cop car with the Ford Police Interceptor, which is built from the Taurus platform.

But with deep loyalty to the reliable Crown Vic in many departments, questions remained as to why Ford didn't just tweak the Crown Victoria platform and replace the V8 engine with the fuel-friendly EcoBoost V6 engine.

Cunningham explained that in the name of cost effectiveness, manufacturers routinely base their police and other specialty fleet vehicles on consumer models. And with demand for the Crown Victoria slipping, the best course became a new course from a financial and practicality standpoint.

"It would be inefficient for Ford to keep around the platform just for a niche vehicle that maybe sells a couple of thousand a year," Cunningham said. "The major manufacturers are looking for platforms that are more versatile, modern and fuel-efficient, which will probably look more attractive from an accounting perspective and a city budget perspective also."

Ford Police Interceptor

The City of Chicago placed an order for 500 of the Ford Police Interceptor sedans and utility vehicles, not exactly breaking news since the vehicles are produced in Chicago, but still a big-market vote of confidence for the new models.

The Ford Police Interceptor breaks some new ground with a front-wheel drive platform that includes an all-wheel drive option.

The Michigan State Police Precision Driving Unit is at the forefront of police vehicle evaluation. And of the six four-wheeled police vehicles tested in September of 2011 for the 2012 model year — Chevrolet's Caprice 9C1, Impala 9C1 and Tahoe utility; the Dodge Charger; the Taurus-based Ford Police Interceptor sedan and Explorer-based utility vehicle — only the Ford models use a front-wheel drive platform.

"The front-wheel drive was surprisingly a very predictable vehicle," Flegel said of the performance testing results of the Ford models.

"With front-wheel drive vehicles, you kind of expect them to understeer (continue in a straight line when the steering wheel is turned). We did not get a whole lot of understeer with the new Interceptor."

But Ford didn't pigeonhole itself with a front-wheel drive only model. The company added an all-wheel drive version that comes with a 263-horsepower, 3.5-litre V6, or the turbocharged EcoBoost 3.5-litre with 365 horsepower and 350 pound-feet of torque.

"With the police that are used to their trusty Crown Vic, they might be a little suspicious of the new platform because it is a front-whee drive platform," Cunningham said.

"But the all-wheel drive version within that platform adds to the flexibility, and that may be something that brings the police forces on board with the all-wheel drive."

From the rear-wheel drive monster known as the Crown Victoria, to the sleek, fuel-efficient, front-wheel drive Taurus, there is no turning back now.
